

E-1 and E-2 change of status now available to certain New Zealanders

By Elizabeth M. Klarin

June 10, 2019 | IMMIGRATION

As of today, June 10, 2019, certain New Zealand nationals can now request a change of status to the E-1 nonimmigrant trader classification and the E-2 nonimmigrant investor classification. Eligible New Zealand nationals already in the United States in a lawful nonimmigrant status can file Form I-129, Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker with U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), to request a change of status to the E-1 or E-2 classification, or a qualifying employer can file Form I-129 on their behalf. Spouses and unmarried children under 21 years of age of E-1 and E-2 nonimmigrants, and employees who are already in the United States, may also seek to change status to E-1 or E-2 classification as dependents by filing Form I-539, Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status.

As noted by the USCIS, visas or classification as an E-1 or E-2 nonimmigrant “are open to citizens of countries with which the United States has a treaty of commerce and navigation or similar agreement, and in certain other cases, such as here, where Congress has enacted legislation.” E-1 status allows citizens of certain countries to be admitted to the United States to engage in international trade on their own behalf, or to act as an executive, managerial, supervisory or essential employee of such traders or qualifying organizations. E-2 status allows qualifying country citizens to be admitted to the United States when they are investing substantial capital in a U.S. business and meet certain other requirements (e.g. non-marginality), or as an executive, managerial, supervisory or essential employee of such investors or qualifying organizations.

Disclaimer: The information in this post is provided for general informational purposes only, and may not reflect the current law in your jurisdiction. No information contained in this post should be construed as legal advice from our firm or the individual author, nor is it intended to be a substitute for legal counsel on any subject matter. No reader of this post should act or refrain from acting on the basis of any information included in, or accessible through, this post without seeking the appropriate legal or other professional advice on the particular facts and circumstances at issue from a lawyer licensed in the recipient’s state, country or other appropriate licensing jurisdiction.